THIS MONTH'S COVER

Dale Jorgenson, Director of Golf at the Camp Zama Golf Course, stops to check the construction progress on hole #5 from the vantage point of the new bridge which crosses the waterway that connects the two new lakes. The grand opening of hole #5 on 1 June marks the end of 15 months of construction on holes 11, 12, 18 and 5. The new 5th hole features two large lakes joined together by a connecting waterway and a bridge. The 5th hole also features a beach bunker, the only one of its kind in this area. While the lakes on the hole are certainly scenic, they are functional as well. The golf course will draw water from the lakes in order to water the golf course. Previous to the construction of the lakes, the course only had 200,000 gallons of usable water storage which was kept in an above ground storage tank. Now, the water is pumped from the lakes to the tank when the water level drops below a predetermined level, ensuring adequate water supply during the driest of weather. All of the water the golf course uses is recycled water generated right here at Camp Zama. Previous to the lakes, most of the recycled water went unused (and unstored) as there was no additional storage capacity. Course conditions will only continue to improve with the added watering capabilities that these lakes bring us.

ts Facelift

by Dale Jorgenson, Director of Golf

onara to par 70 and hello to par 72 as the 5th hole opens for play on 1 June, after being months. The NAF Major Construction project which regraded the fairways on holes and constructed two large interconnected lakes with a combined capacity of 8.2 million ter is complete. While everyone agrees the new 5th hole is beautiful, many don't know that it also serves a very important vious to the lake construction, the course only had 160,000 gallons of irrigation water available which was stored in an l tank (supplied by effluent water from the waster water treatment facility on post). This was not enough water to supply urse or meet our peak demand during the dry season. Now, instead of pumping excess water to the river when our tank is ed water will be held in the two new lakes. We can now draw from the lakes to supplement our irrigation system which water capacity 50X. The additional watering capability will allow us to even further improve the course quality under any lition.

tion to the NAF Major Construction project on holes 11, 12 and 5, the entire golf course has been rebuilt using in-house lf course staff constructed 19 spacious contoured greens averaging 6,500 square feet (including an island green). On every dding bunkers, lakes and mounds were either built or rebuilt to make them more maintainable and more interesting. The uilt to USGA specifications, allow for more pin locations, improved drainage and overall better turf quality. We also new trees (resistant to the pine beetle) to replace the es. It all adds up to a more interesting and exciting for our patrons.

al phase of work involves renovation of the Camp Zama d completion of new cart paths from tee to green (July). The clubhouse project is underway with a mpletion date of 24 October 2007. It includes upgrades and shower areas for men and women, conversion of a n into a 19th hole lounge, additional cart storage, and a nning on the existing club house so outdoor seating areas utilized. The dining room will be closed from 2 June - t we will continue to offer full menu service from our n although seating will be limited. The total project cost n with all of the funds coming from Camp Zama.

ne am so happy that the major course construction is ed. Of course we'll always have smaller projects going on o enhance the course. With so much happening at Camp ouse, you don't want to miss the chance to play the e for yourself the many enhancements. And, just to be de, you might want to buy a few extra balls before o the first tee.
